DESCRIPTION

Residential Mental Health Treatment Facility

Residential mental health treatment facilities refer to non-hospital facilities that offer psychiatric services and treatment programs for individuals with mental health and substance use disorders. Facilities tend to offer intensive programs with daily individual and group therapy sessions with the goal of improving functionality and reintegrating patients in their communities.

The American Society of Addition Medicine (ASAM) Levels of CARE[1]

The ASAM Criteria describe SUDs treatments based on four broad levels of care: (1) Outpatient services, (2) Intensive Outpatient/Partial Hospitalization Services, (3) Residential/Inpatient Services, and (4) Medially Managed Intensive Inpatient Services. The following definitions pertain to this policy:

- ASAM Level 3.5: "Called Clinically Managed Medium-Intensity Residential Services for adolescents and Clinically Managed High-Intensity Residential Services for adults, this level of care provides 24-hour care with trained counselors to stabilize multidimensional imminent danger and prepare for outpatient treatment. Patients in this level are able to tolerate and use full active milieu or therapeutic communities. Level 3 encompasses residential services that are described as co-occurring capable, co-occurring enhanced, and complexity capable services, which are staffed by designated addiction treatment, mental health, and general medical personnel who provide a range of services in a 24-hour treatment setting."
- ASAM Level 3.7: "Called the Medically Monitored High-Intensity Inpatient Services for adolescents and Medically Monitored Intensive Inpatient Services Withdrawal Management for adults, this level of care provides 24-hour nursing care with a physician's availability for significant problems in Dimensions 1, 2, or 3. Patients in this level of care require medication and have a recent history of withdrawal management at a less intensive level of care, marked by past and current inability to complete withdrawal management and enter into continuing addiction treatment. This is the appropriate setting for patients with subacute biomedical and emotional, behavioral, or cognitive problems that are so severe that they require inpatient treatment. Level 3 encompasses residential services that are described as co-occurring capable, co-occurring enhanced, and complexity capable services, which are staffed by designated addiction treatment, mental health, and general medical personnel who provide a range of services in a 24-hour treatment setting."[1]

Custodial Care

Custodial care refers to:

1. Nonmedical assistance, such as assistance with activities of daily living
2. Health-related services provided for the primary purposed of meeting the member's personal needs or maintaining a level of function, regardless of setting.
3. Remaining in treatment for the purpose of supportive living environment or avoidance of to avoid returning to home environment.

CLINICAL PRACTICE GUIDELINES

American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM)

In 2013, ASAM published guidelines for placement, continued stay, transfer, or discharge of patients with addiction and co-occurring conditions. The guideline book offers specific guidance for the 3rd levels of care, residential/inpatient services.[1]

Mental Health America (MHA)

In 2015, MHA published a position statement on Residential Treatment for Children and Adolescents with Serious Mental Health and Substance Use Conditions. The statement calls out great variance in the quality of residential treatment facilities and promotes evidence-based practices, monitored outcomes, mandated licensure, training and continuing education, and required background checks for a treatment personnel.[2]

Oregon Health Authority (OHA)

OHA published rules and regulations for Residential Treatment Facilities and Residential Treatment Homes for Adults with Mental Health Disorders. The rules "promote optimum health, mental and social well-being, and recovery for adults with mental health disorders through the availability of a wide range of home and community based residential settings and services. They prescribe how services will be provided in safe, secure, and homelike environments that recognize the dignity, individuality, and right to self-determination of each individual."[3]
